SEIZED LIQUORS AT WESTERY

Ordered Destroyed After Hearing in Judge Williams' Court—Antonio Salemeno Under Bonds of $100 for Appearance at November Term—Winter Trolley Schedule to Pleasant View and Watch Hill to go in Force Monday.

There will soon be diminution of the big stock of beer and other intoxicating liquors now at the Westery police station, as a large portion has been declared legally forfeited to the state and warrant for their destruction will be issued. The action that will result in the reduction of the stock was taken at the regular session on Friday of the Third District court, Judge Oliver H. Williams presiding.

There was hearing against the liquor and vessels of Attilio Fraquilla, Chief of Police Cornelius Brannan, and Chief of Police Cornelius Brannan, as complainant. The chief testified that, armed with a search warrant and assisted by other officers, he searched the freight depot of the Norwich-Westerly trolley road, and seized twelve cases of beer, twenty-five barrels of ale, seventeen kegs of lager and three barrels of bottled beer. When the raiding party visited the trolley freight depot, Fraquilla had just loaded two half-barrels of beer in his covered wagon for delivery, and these were seized, as were also several half-barrels in the open freight house, which had been prepared for delivery.

There was a room in the rear of the freight house that was locked and the clerk in charge had no key, and Fraquilla declined to hand over the key to the officer. Chief Brannan then forced the door and in this room found the balance of the beer which was also seized. Every package bore a label from the shipper bearing the printed address Attilio Fraquilla, Westery, R. I. The chief testified at the time that all the beer in that room was his property. The chief testified that he had seen such packages on the streets and had seen beer packages having Fraquilla's address in several places about town that he had raided. He had seen such packages at the Hecht, Thompson, Doyers and other places.

Smith, an employee of the Norwich-Westerly trolley road at the freight station, testified that he was in charge of the room made up on September 2; that the beer arrived the day before it was seized by the officers. The goods were delivered on the platform of the freight house, the freight paid and receipted for by Fraquilla, who rolled the packages of beer into the room in the rear of the freight house. There was no other freight put in that room and Fraquilla held the key. So far as witness knows, no trolley employees had a key to this room, nor had any control whatsoever over Fraquilla's store room. The beer was delivered to Fraquilla on the platform and he rolled it into the room.

Joseph Wells, employed on the freight platform, testified that the beer seized was delivered to Fraquilla on the station platform the day before the police officers took it away. Joseph Hersey, an unwilling witness, testified that he had purchased half-barrels of beer from Fraquilla on several occasions, paying $2.50 per half-barrel. He had made a purchase just before the raid was made, and he had seen Fraquilla deliver beer at Thompson's.

The case against the liquor and vessels of Thomas Pont, a Watch Hill barber, was considered. Chief Brannan testified to raiding the place under a search warrant and as a result thirty-six bottles of beer, four quarts of wine, a pint of whiskey and two one-gallon jugs of whiskey were seized. All but the jugs were found in the shop and tenement overhead. The jugs were in a box, brought by the express car of the Pawcatuck Valley street railway. This box was brought into the shop while the officers were there, and the trolley employee took the box back to the car and did not deliver. Chief Brannan told the jury that the two one-gallon jugs of whiskey were ordered delivered to the party addressed, and it was actually seized by Chief Brannan, police officer at Watch Hill.

Sergeant Brown and Policeman Barber gave corroborative evidence, after which Judge Williams declared the liquor forfeited to the state, and authorized the issue of warrant for their destruction.

Judge John W. Sweeney appeared for the defendant, in the case against the liquor and vessels of Antonio Salemeno. Chief Brannan testified to the seizure of a half-barrel of ale on the trolley freight depot, home at 27 Pleasant street. The beer was in the cellar, connected by a lead pipe to a faucet in the small room on the floor above. Underneath the faucet was a screen pail with a small quantity of beer, and on a nearby shelf was a dozen and a half of schooler beer glasses. An adjoining room bore evidence, by the presence of cuspidors, ladies and chairs, that it was a place where beer was served. While the searching party was there half a dozen men called on the house, but went away immediately.

The chief said he knew the men but could not give the names of more than two. Salemeno was in the cellar when the beer was being removed by the officers. He said he had seen the beer before on occasions when he made friendly calls, but was not as observing as when armed with search warrants. The half-barrel of beer, and not hidden from view, nor were the rooms where the beer was drawn and served locked. There were no children in the house when the raid was made, although there is usually a horde of children about the place.

Police Sergeant Brown told of the finding and seizure of the beer, and of the room where it is served. He counted nine casks at the place, during the search, and heard two of them call for beer, but did not hear the response of Salemeno. In addition to the beer, the chief testified he had visited the place July 2 and July 31, and on the latter date saw several persons, men go into the place, and on the first visit he saw Daniel Watson and a man he did not know in the house.

Constable James Maxwell testified that he assisted in taking a half-barrel of beer from the cellar. Daniel Watson, an involuntary witness, testified that he resided in Pawcatuck and that early in July he was in a house on the corner of Pleasant
